UDI IN THE NEWS

Opinion: Blame physical limits, not foreigners, for Vancouver house prices

By Anne McMullin, special to The Vancouver Sun, June 9, 2015

'Gentle Densification' is a concept that is gaining media attention. The term refers to zoning changes that allow for higher densities in existing neighborhoods that will not dramatically alter the character of the area.

BOB RENNIE ANNUAL ADDRESS: RECAP

On May 22, 2015 Bob Rennie delivered another insightful and informative presentation to a packed room of over 1,000 attendees for his annual UDI address.

This year's presentation, entitled 'Can We Solve Affordability Without Density?' has spurred a tremendous amount of discussion around housing affordability.
